City Council Approves $15.1 M Budget; Tax Rate Up 2 Cents

by Drew Clark

The Greenbelt City Council approved a fiscal year 2000 budget with a two cent property tax increase, turning back several last-minute proposals for further tax increases to pay for more city police officers.

At $15,141,300, budget expenditures for the fiscal year beginning on July 1 are expected to be 9% greater than the amount spent this year, and 4.5% greater than the amount of money allocated for FY1999, which ends on June 30. Property taxes will rise to $1.49 from $1.47 per $100 of assessed value, an amount proposed early in the budget process.

But the most controversial subject of the final budget work session centered on efforts to boost the number of sworn police officers. With three of the five council members unconvinced that the city needed additional police, Mayor Judith Davis and Council Member Edward Putens were stymied in repeated efforts to increase the budget for public safety. Constituting more than one-third of the budget, that department's budget was already expected to grow 8% over the amount spent this year, or 2% over the amount allocated for FY1999.

The decision by the council — which rejected four separate proposals for adding different numbers of police officers to the force — led Police Chief James Craze to criticize the council.

"There is a hue and a cry in the community for more officers," said Craze. "There is an election year coming up, and I am surprised they took the decision that they did."

The work session, held in the Community Center on Wednesday, May 19, began with City Manager Michael McLaughlin reviewing sources of revenue and anticipated expenditures for each of the city's departments. The council then reviewed budgetary questions raised by previous work sessions — almost all of which would have added to the expenditure column — and taking votes on contested measures.

But with only $15,096,900 in revenue and proposed expenditures of $15,275,700 by the end of the evening, council members noted that the $178,800 difference could result in adding nearly six cents to property taxes. By eliminating proposals for an assistant city manager and a juvenile detective — both of which had mustered three votes during the five-hour work session — the city council narrowed the difference between expenditures and revenue to $44,000.

The council also agreed to raise the fee for apartment licensing (to $50 from $33), raise the fee for single-family rental housing inspections (to $100 from $50), and increase the cost for residential and non-residential aquatic center memberships by 2%. It will lower the waste collection fee to $41.20 from $42.20 per quarter.

Debate

In the debate over police officers, Putens pushed hard for five new officers. Supported by Mayor Davis, who sought in vain for an additional council vote of support, the two argued that public pressure was demanding more police officers.

But Mayor Pro Tem Thomas White, noting that the cost of each officer was $72,000 for salary, benefits, and the cost of uniforms, equipment, and a vehicle, painted the proposal as excessive. During the last budget cycle, city council authorized four additional police officers through the approval of a federal Community Oriented Policing (COPs) grant — none of which have yet to be hired. The city's budget proposal to council stated that "the impact of the additional officers will be evaluated in FY2000 before any other changes are recommended."

"I don't know where the four cents is going to come from,"

Focus Group Receives Draft Sector Plan for Metro Area

by Virginia Beauchamp

We got our homework assignments on April 22. That's when the staff team from the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission (MNCPPC) handed out the 184-page working draft, plus appendices, of the Greenbelt Metro Area Sector Plan & Sectional Map Amendment.

This large book reflected the many, many hours of discussion over the last two years—first, by a focus group, then later by that group and additional citizen participants. Those involved had been charged to come up with the most desirable plan for development of the A. H. Smith property west of the Beltway Plaza and the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) site at the end of the Green Line. Additionally the plan looked at the surrounding area from Rhode Island Avenue on the west to Kenilworth Avenue on the east and from the commercial properties fronting Greenbelt Road on its south side to Sunnyside Avenue on the north.

Following the last of four charrettes over the summer and fall of 1998, MNCPPC staff had prepared this weighty volume, written in outline form, detailing what had been agreed on by the participants. Our charge at the April meeting was to read through the first 100 pages and to provide feedback on the work as a whole and on any particular aspect of the plan. Staff made clear that the book was a work in progress. For example, maps and other illustrations called for in the text had not yet even been prepared.

May 17 Meeting

On May 17 we met again — this time in the Greenbelt council chamber — to review a sheaf of pages containing comments from that earlier home work assignment, as well as new pages to insert as replacements in the loose leaf book. Under staff leadership, we read through each of the suggestions. We were allowed to clarify comments and to supplement them; we were not, however, permitted to discuss the issues in depth. According to staff, this was not a forum to work out differences; instead it was an occasion to register comments on issues any one of us might consider important.

Connector Roads

In the written record of responses to the first draft of the book was John Krouse's comment on a proposed five-lane connector road between the two development nodes envisioned on the Smith property and the WMATA tract. This north-south road would connect the Greenbelt Rd. entrance to the former with the parking structure for the latter.

Instead of such a road, Krouse, a resident of the Hollywood section of College Park, suggested instead the reconfiguring of Cherrywood Lane as "a viable alternative." He recognized, however, he wrote, that Cherrywood would not serve the proposed south Core Area development node "as efficiently as the proposed connector road."

City's 62nd Anniversary Has Events for Everyone

by Jason Martens

Next weekend the City of Greenbelt hosts a birthday celebration, which promises to be as exciting as those in previous years. Greenbelt will honor its 62nd anniversary since its incorporation in 1937 with a variety of events for all residents. The festivities, beginning Friday, June 4 and continuing through Sunday, June 6, will feature traditional activities along with new events in this year's festival.

A major event of the celebration weekend is a chance for the public to view renovations on the "Mother and Child Statue," a Greenbelt landmark. Residents can see conservator Sharon Koehler make renovations and ask her questions on Saturday.

The excitement begins on Friday with a full schedule of activities from 5 p.m.-10:30 p.m. Highlights of the first day's activities include a showing of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" at the Old Greenbelt Theater at 5, 7:30, and 9, and a combination of rock and jazz presented by "Jonson Miller and Jung" in the New Deal Café at the Community Center at 8:30.

The annual Summer Concert and Performance Series sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Department also premieres with a performance by The Peabody Ragtime Ensemble at 7 p.m. at Buddy Attick Lake Park or at the Community Center in case of rain. In commenting on the Peabody Ragtime Ensemble, City Recreation Coordinator Greg Varda said, "It will be a great start to the Summer Concert and Performance Series," he added.

For Greenbelt's sports fans, events will also take place on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. Two Little League games will occur on Friday at 6 p.m. at McDonald Field and 7 p.m. at Braden Field. A third Little League game will also take place at 10 a.m. on Saturday at McDonald Field. A large amount of interest is being given to Little League this year from city residents. In describing Greenbelt's enthusiasm for Little League, Varda said, "It's more popular now than ever."

The Greenbelt Tennis Association will also hold the second round of the Memorial Day Tournament at Braden Field on Saturday and Sunday at 9 a.m. The tournament, composed of local players, will occur throughout the morning and early afternoon. The annual Greenbelt Volksmarchers 5 or 10K walk and 25K bike event across the city will also be held for all residents up to the challenge from 8 a.m. — 1 p.m.

Several other activities will be taking place on Saturday as well. The Greenbelt Museum, utilizing space in the Community Center, will be displaying its exhibit, "Fashionable, Functional and Frugal: Modern Style Comes Home 1930-1946." It will be open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Flea market items will also be sold from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. by the Friends of Greenbelt Museum (FOGM) at the Roosevelt Center Mall.

The public is also invited to help clean up the grounds of the Community Center from 9-11 a.m. through the Adopt-a-Park event sponsored by the Lions Club.

Annual Meeting/Elections Held for GHI Membership

by Mary Moien

The annual membership meeting of Greenbelt Homes, Inc. (GHI) was held on May 20, with elections continuing to May 21. All five incumbent board members were reelected in a fairly close vote as shown in the table below. Since only three members were running for three positions on the audit committee, all were elected.

The meeting was calm, with a good turnout. (More than a quorum were present.) No old business or new business was on the agenda. Annual reports of the board had been delivered previously to all members. Board President Keith Jahoda, however, had an addition to the annual report involving the referendum on Historic District status. Based on the strength of a large turnout and a large majority in favor of Historic District status, Jahoda stated he has written to the city asking them to go forward with the process.

FOCUS GROUP

To this suggestion, Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis responded that the city is, in contrast, "actively trying to downgrade Cherrywood Lane," not to enhance its potential for carrying still more cars. She mentioned traffic calming efforts the city had already introduced and the city's concern with the nearby fragile environment.

This matter of a connecting road, said councilmember Thomas White, "highlights the competing issues and is the point of most tensions between the various jurisdictions." He referred to the rejection by both Hollywood citizens on the study team and those from Berwyn Heights of any connection at all from their communities to the Core Area site. He saw the proposed north-south road as "a relief valve" for Cherrywood Lane. On the other hand, it would be "detrimental to environmental goals," he added.

Harold Foster, transportation expert for MNCPPC, in effect shut down discussion when he commented that the issue could not be resolved during the Sectional Map Amendment process. This was true, he pointed out, because this process was proceeding in advance of the federal and state highway administration studies of a possible Beltway interchange for the Greenbelt Station development. "It's merely a place holder," he said, "— the least common denominator."

Two other participants commented briefly concerning the proposed north-south road. Mayor William T. Armistead, Jr. of Berwyn Heights said that "any slower way of reaching the Metro station" from the vicinity of Greenbelt Road "would be self-defeating" and Dean Armstrong, representing Capital Office Park, deplored the increasingly congested traffic situation along Cherrywood Lane, which provides access to this highrise office development.

Branchville Rezoning

During previous discussion, the idea of downzoning to residential of industrial properties west of the railroad track in Branchville had been generally agreed upon. Some of the warehouse and automotive repair facilities in that area had been deemed unsightly and not in conformance with the upscale development envisioned to the east. But Terry Schum of the College Park Planning Staff brought up a difficulty with such downzoning since a major employer, Stone Industrial, has been considering expansion of its more than 17-acre facility. The company, which now has a work force of 143 persons, Schum pointed out,

Highway Planner Speaks to CCRIC

by Barbara Young

Kate Spencer, chair of CCRIC, Citizens to Conserve and Restore Indian Creek, announced at the group's May 23 meeting that Max Azizi, Regional Planner for the State Highway Administration, will discuss the review and permitting processes in connection with a new Beltway interchange. Such an interchange has been proposed to serve the multi-use project at Greenbelt Metro envisioned by Metroland developers. The discussion will take place June 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the College Park Municipal Building one block off Route 1 at Knox Road.

She described a recent Sector Planning Group meeting and said that written comments on the first 160 pages of the MNCP&PC proposed sector plan may be submitted up to June 15. The next Sector Planning meeting will be held in July.

Plans for stream walks and movie nights were discussed, as was the June 5 Agricultural Research Center Open House. Public relations and publicity has partnerships with both the University of Maryland and the State of Maryland, as well as foreign contracts. Although its present plant would be unaffected by downzoning, the company would be unable to get a mortgage for expansion if its operation was characterized as a non-conforming use, Schum said.

Redevelopment

A wholly new issue was introduced by Tim Wanamaker, representing EDC (the Economic Development Corps of Prince George's County). His group had recommended that Springhill Lake be redeveloped as a high-tech office park. He also suggested that the parking structure facing Greenbelt Rd. in front of the Beltway Plaza be removed and reconstructed at the rear of the shopping mall.

Letters

"Unwise Choice"

The Old Curmudgeon's cartoon in the May 13 edition of the News Review was an unwise choice of subject matter.

The renovation of Roosevelt Center presents a very temporary and inconsequential inconvenience to Greenbelt citizens. To compare it, even in jest, with current events in the Balkans, is to trivialize the death and destruction being wrought and suffered in that chronically troubled region.

E. C. Anderson

matters were also discussed. The fund-raising committee will meet at Esther Rivinus' house on Tuesday, June 1, at 7 p.m.

For the rest of the summer, CCRIC will meet every other Sunday at 5 p.m. in the Community Center, not every Sunday as previously. Succeeding meetings are June 13, June 27, July 11, July 15, August 8 and August 22.

For more information call 301-441-3844 and leave a message. The call will be returned.

Councilmember White immediately objected. There had never been an intention to redevelop Springhill Lake except as phased-in over time. Kap Kapistan of Beltway Plaza responded with a little history of the parking structure in question. It had been mandated in an agreement with Caldor, he said, when that major retailer had leased the second-floor space of the former S. Klein department store. Caldor required second-floor level parking access.

More Home Work

The meeting wrapped up with a new assignment for participants: By June 15 they were to respond with comments on a new set of about 160 draft pages. Probably on July 13 the group would reassemble, it was agreed, for a new discussion.

OBITUARIES

Lekh Batra Dies

Lekh Batra, research scientist and community activist, died on May 20 following a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 69. Born in a village near the Indus River in British India, he was the third of six children in a traditional Hindu family. The entire family became refugees during Partition. He was the first in his family to attend high school and college.

As a President of India scholar at Khalsa College he earned a B.S. with honors and a M.Sc. with honors in botany. He received his Ph.D. from Cornell University in 1958. Swarthmore College brought him his first teaching job and a wife. He married one of his students, Suzanne W. Tubby, in 1960. The wedding took place in India.

Dr. Batra taught at the University of Kansas from 1960 - 1967. During these years Dr. Batra became a U.S. citizen. The couple had two children.

He joined the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center, where he was Research Micologist and, later, Science Advisor to the Director. His major research involved solving microbial problems in world agriculture: fungi that cause diseases and economic losses in wild plants, trees and crops, including cotton, elms, peaches and other orchard crops, blueberries, cranberries and beans; fungi that help plants absorb nutrients from the soil; fungi (mostly yeasts) that are used to ferment foods and drinks, making them more nutritious and digestible; identified fungi growing on massive quantities of warehoused cheese and other products; use of fungi to control agricultural pests.

Dr. Batra cultured and identified thousands of unknown fungi collected worldwide and discovered 38 new fungus species, five new genera, two new families, one new order and seven new fungus diseases of plants. He published over 130 scientific works including four books on mycology, plant pathology, botany, biotechnology and ecology. Following his retirement in 1994, Dr. Batra was the area co-ordinator for the United Nations Food and Agriculture's International Encyclopedia of Life Support Systems.

His appointment to BARC brought the Batra family to Greenbelt in 1967; they first lived on Plateau Place, then the 45 court of Ridge. Here, they raised two children, Mirabai, a graduate of the Mount Sinai Medical School and resident of Brooklyn, and Persaram, who is working on a Ph.D. at Penn State.

Dr. Batra was an active member of the Rotary Clubs in Beltsville and Saranac Lake, where the Batras spend part of each summer. He was active in BARC's Ecology Committee, run by scientist volunteers, helping to prevent thousands of acres from being surplus in the 1980s. He helped lead depositors' rallies to force the State of Maryland to cover assets that had been frozen during the savings and loan crisis of 1985. He was also active in the Greenbelt community preserving green space and the original design of the planned community, serving on numerous committees. He was a proofreader for the News Review for many years.

He maintained an active interest in India and his family there. Dr. Batra has written an autobiography about growing up in a remote, roadless village in the Thar Desert, near the Indus River, life as a student in Lahore, and adventures as a penniless refugee surviving the carnage of Partition in 1947. CITY COUNCIL

cents is going to come from," said White, referring to the minimum property tax necessary to pay for the additional officers. "We haven't seen the effect of the four we authorized last year," said Council member Alan Turnbull, contending that the number of sworn officers had grown to 53 from 35 in relatively few years.

"I am looking at the rate that the department grows and wondering whether we are reacting with a fairly simplistic numbers response," he said. "We have not given enough time for the whole community policing philosophy to take hold, and I am not inclined to hire more people."

"That is how you respond to the outcry?" Mayor Davis questioned Turnbull, referring to the heated reactions about the impact that the failed Parkside annexation proposal might have had upon city services, including police service.

No Contradiction

"I don't see any contradiction," Turnbull said, arguing that the community's verdict not to expand territory was not a mandate to pump up the number of police officers. Moreover, he cited Chief Craze's report to city council that 25% of all officers were off-duty because of a combination of long-term leave, paternity leave, and injuries.

"That is what people are referring to when they say they are not seeing enough cops," Turnbull said. The public isn't clamoring for five more officers — or even the four more officers that have been authorized but were still not hired — he said. "They are responding to the one-quarter of the patrol that is not at work."

Putens, however, said that he felt last year's four new officers had been detailed for service in the Springhill Lake area, not for the city as a whole.

"We are hearing cries for help," said Putens. "If we are going to take advantage of this extra income, we need to do it now. I am trying to be pro-active and to think ahead, because time is going to catch up with us really fast."

"My problem is that when I hear, 'let's get five new officers and put them in cars' we are doing the same old thing," said Roberts. "It is clear to me that the same old thing is not getting the job done."

Inspection Fees

Other items of extensive discussion concerned council's decision to raise the single family inspection fee to $100 instead of the $75 recommended by the city management, providing an increase in deferred compensation to retired police officers and boost the night differential pay for police officers to $1.35 an hour more from $1.25 an hour more, and the decision to authorize the Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts' $21,000 proposal for funding and, also, hiring an arts coordinator.

Under the Department of Public Works, council authorized the purchase of a street sweeper jointly with College Park, Berwyn Heights, and New Carrollton — the latter city's unexpected participation in the project refunding $9,000 to the amount previously budgeted. Council also authorized the department's $7,000 materials storage area and a $6,000 irrigation head. Additional items authorized for the Department of Recreation and Parks included $3,600 for a recreation brochure, $2,000 for a scoreboard for Springhill Lake Recreation Center, $3,400 for a second defibrillator for the community center (the aquatic center will also receive one), and additional funding for cleaning the community center and providing a staff member to supervise youth basketball in the community center in winter.

But again and again, the work-session returned to questions of police funding, whether the proposal was for five, three, or one new officer. Besides the question of numbers, council members argued about a proposal from the Greenbriar community association to fund half the cost of a police officer for both commercial and residential portions of the neighborhood.

Discussion revolved around whether it was appropriate for one community in Greenbelt to pay for more extensive police services based on their ability to raise revenues. This debate featured council member White pushing for the proposal over the strong objection of both Turnbull and Roberts.

MVA Asks Public To Spot "Bad Tags"

Maryland residents can now assist the Motor Vehicle Administration (MVA) in its effort to locate vehicles whose owners have been avoiding Maryland State taxes. If citizens notice a vehicle with out-of-state license plates that has been parking in the same residential complex or area for over 30 days, they are asked to call 1-877-BAD-TAGS. The caller will be asked for the vehicle's license plate number, address where the vehicle has been spotted, and if known, the owner of that vehicle.

It is Maryland State law that all Maryland residents have their vehicles registered in Maryland within 30 days of moving to this state.

Magpie Comes to Greenbelt

by Konrad Herling

Terry Leonino and Greg Artzner aren't just any other couple of nearby Takoma Park. They aren't just any couple who happen to sing folk songs that might catch your attention. They aren't just some folks who feel strongly about a few issues when it's fashionable to express their viewpoints. They are "Magpie," one of the most widely acclaimed folk song duos over the past 25 years, having received numerous awards, including the traditional Folk Duo of the Year from the Washington Area Music Association in 1998. On Greenbelt Day, Saturday, June 5, they're performing at the Greenbelt Community Center Gym, in a concert co-sponsored by the Greenbelt Arts Center and the City of Greenbelt.

Since the late '80s, the Arts Center and City of Greenbelt have brought steel bands, Afro-Cuban, Cajun, jazz, and contra music to Greenbelt Day. This year it's folk music. Magpie, influenced by such as Phil Ochs, Pete Seeger, Billie Holiday and Woody Guthrie, performed several years ago at the Greenbelt Labor Day Festival and at the Greenbelt Arts Center. Most noted for their pieces about the environment, civil rights and the peace movement, the couple has also been teaching a pre-school curriculum, incorporating American Sign Language in classrooms throughout the Washington, D.C. and Baltimore areas. Through Wolf Trap, Terry and Greg have also conducted dozens of training workshops, demonstrating and teaching teachers how to teach basic skills to young children. Such workshops have extended as far as Philadelphia and south central Kansas.

It's clear that Magpie has a wide range of interests and approaches to reach audiences of all ages. They probably receive the greatest number of performance requests from environmental organizations. Their musical work has supported such groups as the National Audubon Society, National Wildlife Federation, National Wildlife Refuge System, and the National Park Service. Earth Day 1998, found them performing at Harper's Ferry National Park where their music was a fitting backdrop to an appearance by President Clinton and Vice President Gore.

Greenbelt, long known for its efforts to preserve its environmental quality, is fortunate to host this duo, whose wonderful words are matched only by their musical talent expressed through voice and guitar.

Greenbelters Present "Living Colors" Dance

On Saturday, May 1, Bharatanatyam (Indian Classical dance) titled "Living Colors" was presented at High Point High School. Some members of the company are Greenbelt residents. Consisting of traditional and contemporary compositions, the presentation used colors to illustrate the idea of oneness, peaceful co-existence and global unity. It was characterized by colorful costumes, fast paced dances, melodious music, and eye-catching props.

The unique dance ballet featured 20 local dancers drawn from Jayamangala (a non-profit organization promoting Indian arts) and other dance schools and 10 orchestra members consisting of four vocalists, three percussionists, one violinist, one veena player (stringed Indian instrument) and one keyboard artist. The dance was choreographed and directed by Shobha Subramanian, music composed by the staff of the Jayamangala school, and Sanskrit lyrics penned by Maragatham Sundaresan. The performance

Statue Gets Shampoo and Facial

by Dennis Jelalian

The conservation of the Mother and Child statue began with the public works crew erecting a scaffold around the statue so that conservator Sharon Koehler could work on the upper parts of the statue. "Public Works has done a great job," Koehler said. Koehler's first week was spent mostly in cleaning the statue. She began by working on the black marks at the top of the statue; the tarry residue of burned tires. First she used a special non-ionic detergent and water, scrubbing hard with a variety of brushes from a toothbrush to a wire brush. Next she used a detergent that is soluble both in water and mineral spirits. This detergent is particularly helpful at solubilizing the greasy substances on the statue, such as the tar. The hard scrubbing continued. She rinsed the detergent off and repeated the process many times.

The tar, and other stains are stubborn. Koehler picked away at the tar and tree sap with scalpel tools. She chipped away at the paint. She used steam to loosen the dirt and stains. On one side of the statue, green algae had become attached to the limestone. Koehler removed it with a biocide.

Asphalt

Next, Koehler removed all the layers of paint and asphalt at the base of the statue; the first time its been seen in over 20 years. The asphalt has left the concrete underneath badly stained. Much of the base had been painted. The paint was first largely chipped off with a hammer and chisel, then cleaned up with methylene chloride.

The base of the statue originally had a drinking fountain. It hasn't been decided whether or not to restore the fountain.

Koehler is nearing the end of the cleaning phase, although she may apply a chemical poultice to further remove stains. "The statue will look like it's been slimed," she says.

One problem is that tannic acid dripping from a nearby oak has permanently stained parts of the statue, and these stains cannot be removed, because of chemical changes in the limestone.

Next week, once the statue is clean, Koehler will begin to restore some lost parts of the statue. She will carefully color match the mortar to the limestone. She will fill lost parts and gaps with the mortar, and then sculpt the material back, using photographs of the original statue as a guide.

It should be exciting to watch the statue approach the original vision that Lenore Thomas had.

Photos of work in progress on the Mother and Child statue are by Timothy Edberg.

PEDESTRIAN SAFETY TIP

PROBLEM:

If a motorist stops to let someone cross the street, that person may be "screened" from the view of overtaking traffic and may not be seen until the pedestrian suddenly appears in the traffic lane.

ADVICE:

If a car is stopped in traffic, slow down and approach it cautiously. Ask yourself why the car has stopped and assume that the car is hiding a pedestrian.

Never pass a car that has stopped to permit a pedestrian to cross the street.

Be especially alert if the stopped vehicle is a bus because, due to its size, it will be even harder for you to notice a pedestrian until the pedestrian appears in your traffic lane.

Remember that cars are much bigger and much easier to see than pedestrians. Always LOOK for pedestrians (and bicyclists too) and yield to them in the roadway.

Views On Dental Health

NORMAN R. RESSIN,

DISCOLORED TEETH

The darkened color of a front tooth means there is some degree of nerve degeneration. This color change, however, is not conclusive since the pulp (composed of the nerve, blood vessels, and certain other elements) is capable of fully recovering from injury. When this happens we can be left with a tooth that is darker but quite healthy.

Discolored black teeth, are usually caused by color changes produced by an amalgam filling whose metal components have invaded the adjacent tooth structure. There is no reason to replace a discolored filling or one next to darkened tooth structure, unless it is visually objectionable. In fact there is evidence that the discolor-ing invasion actually seals the junction between filling and tooth, making it more secure from decay bacteria. The problem is that decay can also cause discoloration as can a variety of bacteria. The color may be just stain, but to prevent potential difficulties, any pronounced color changes, anterior or posterior, should be checked by your dentist.

Elections

Presentation of Candidates
Sheila Alpers, Chair of the Nominations and Elections Committee, called candidates on stage for a brief presentation by each. Comments were similar to those already published in the News Review and will not be repeated here. There were six candidates for five positions on the board of directors and with the exception of Mary Veazey Clark, all were incumbents.

seconded this idea or the idea of being able to provide GHI with a year's worth of checks in January, each dated for the appropriate month to cover the full year's fees. Hess observed that a survey a few years ago showed little interest in electronic transfers but agreed that there seems to be interest now.
On a second issue, Alpers commented that there had been some interest in voting by mail for the annual meeting elections, as in the successful mail voting in the Historic District referendum. She Betty Deitch addresses the crowd at the GHI annual meeting held May 20. The Board of Director candidates look on.

N&E Committee
The membership of the Nominations and Elections Committee (N&E) is elected at each annual meeting. Prior to the meeting only three had volunteered to run for five positions: Tom Simon, Roger Brown and Andrew Nitz. Additional nominations were sought from the floor, with Don Ridenour and Betsy Barber volunteering to fill out the slate. The five were then elected by acclamation.

New Business
No new business was planned, but members were free to bring up issues from the floor. Pat Adelaide requested that GHI investigate the use of wire transfers for payment of monthly fees. Mat Amberg commented that interested members should contact the new N&E committee.

Kudos
Winding up the meeting, Jahoda thanked people for their efforts. Julia Eichhorst was recognized as "Committee Member of the Year." Betty Cooley was thanked for her years on the Audit Committee and Alpers was thanked for her time on the N&E Committee. Altoria Bell-Ross was introduced as the new editor of the GHI Newsletter. The meeting ended with the award of several door prizes, including a top prize of $250 toward the GHI fee, other smaller GHI prizes, and gift certificates from the Co-op Grocery Store and the New Deal Café.

Eight GHI Homes Sold During "Open House"

by Barbara Young
Eight contracts on GHI homes were signed within a week of the GHI Marketing Committee's community-wide Open House held Sunday, April 25, Julia Eichhorst, acting committee chair, told the News Review.

"Most of the sellers got asking price or close to it. I think we're having a real good sales period in Greenbelt," she said, adding that the desirability and marketability of GHI homes is increasing. Six of the sales were by owners; two were by realtors.

Eichhorst said one couple who bought was just passing through the area, saw the Open House sign on Kenilworth Avenue and decided to check out Greenbelt. The couple is being transferred here from the Midwest.

She said another couple who signed a contract consists of graduate students at the University of Maryland. They saw the Open House ad in the News Review. They had been considering Takoma Park, they said, but found it a bit too expensive. Then at a Greenbelt Theater Film Festival they attended, they were impressed. They told the home's sellers that people waiting in line were actually talking to one another." The couple told Eichhorst

Library Board Meeting

The Prince George's County Board of Library Trustees will meet on Thursday, June 10 at 8 p.m. at the Administrative Offices, 6532 Adelphi Road, Hyattsville.

Library board meetings are open to the public. Speakers must sign up prior to the meeting. For information call 301-699-3500.

Sign language interpretations and other accommodations for individuals with disabilities will be made upon request.

they immediately thought that "Greenbelt must be a really neat place to live in."

A couple with a young child who also bought a home told Eichhorst they liked the idea of seeing all the different homes in one day, and "especially liked the real sense of community" they felt in Old Greenbelt.

The GHI Marketing Committee has developed a "For Sale by Owner" manual to assist owners in preparing their homes for sale and offers four evening seminars per year on the subject. The committee is looking into developing a Web site and new brochures describing Greenbelt. To volunteer or for more information or assistance, contact Julia Eichhorst at 301-345-5508.

ERHS Takes Active Role In Character Building

by Nelda Young

Reputation is who a person is perceived to be; character is who a person is.

Parents, merchants, clergy, and members of service organizations met May 18 for the Eleanor Roosevelt Community Character Education kick-off meeting to promote good morals, values, and character. Those present at the Eleanor Roosevelt High School meeting were asked to help identify needs, exchange information, and brainstorm strategies to reach those goals. ERHS, which began a comprehensive character education program this year, is now expanding its scope into the community. "The shootings at Columbine High School in Colorado were not unexpected," said Dr. Gerald Boarman, CEA/Principal of ERHS. Educators are seeing a lack of values and moral decay in young people today, he said, claiming that statistics on shoplifting, cheating on tests, bullying, bigotry, teen mothers, abortion, cocaine use, and alcohol abuse bear him out.

"Eleanor Roosevelt is the exception," he said, "but vigilance is essential. What we can and must do is teach the importance of tolerance and compassion for others."

A film clip of WRC TV News anchorman Jim Vance's visit to ERHS showed students responding to the question of what can be done to prevent future incidents such as the one that occurred in Littleton, Colorado.

The students suggested:

- Ask yourself, "Do I treat others the way I want to be treated?"
- Parents should teach children the difference between right and wrong.
- Parents should be involved with their children even after they are in high school.

- Teachers are respected by students and should step in to defuse potentially hot situations.
- Students should choose friends who have good character.
- People should be tolerant and attempt to help everyone to fit in.

One student concluded that there are no short, quick solutions to the problems found in schools.

"What does character mean?" Was the question Ian Buggs, a senior at ERHS, answered at the meeting. He said parents must teach their children what is right and wrong, and they must start by the time their children are four years old.

He recalled being offered a cigarette when he was seven years old. The cigarette came from the purse of the friend's mother. Ian reminded the group that though children pretend not to listen, lessons are learned over time and are remembered when needed.

In Ian's opinion, teachers are important role models too and should supplement the lessons taught at home. Ian said he has learned it's okay to "do right" and "just say NO to drugs." "After all," he concluded, "drugs are illegal, you can get arrested for using them, and they can kill you even on the first try."

Discussion groups were formed and members made suggestions to the committee. These included that children need to be taught right from wrong and need love and acceptance. Children need positive role models: parents, grandparents, neighbors, and teachers. One group recalled Hilary Rodham Clinton's statement, "It takes a village to raise a child."

A free all-day Caring Training session for middle and high school teachers will be taught by Jackie Jones at ERHS on Tuesday, June 22. To enroll call David Jakob at 301-513-5400.

A new technique in breast cancer surgery may make it less painful. Testing to see if the cancer has spread, doctors used to remove lymph nodes from the armpit. Using the new "sentinel" lymph node biopsy, the doctor finds and removes only the first node for testing.

Herpes infections that involve the eyes are particularly painful and dangerous and also tend to recur. Researchers at Baylor College of Medicine found that an antiviral drug such as acyclovir (Zovirax) can reduce both the incidence and severity of relapses.

For some patients with prostate cancer, implanting tiny, radioactive seeds—brachytherapy—may be as effective as surgery with far fewer side effects, according to researchers in Seattle.

Baby health check: a two-minute test, developed in a San Francisco research center, measures how much water is being retained by the pregnant woman. Water-weight gain is a good indicator of the baby's weight; a higher birth weight usually means a healthier baby.
